About DTV

The German Textile Care Association (DTV) has represented the textile care industry since 1975 as a strong employers' and trade association with around 800 member companies.

In addition to representing the interests of the industry vis-à-vis society, politics and trade unions, it advises its members on business, professional, collective bargaining and social policy issues. The DTV offers professional training through seminars and workshops up to master craftsman training. It also initiates working groups for cross-company professional dialogue.

The DTV is the voice of the industry and ensures the visibility of its topics among customers, consumers and potential employees/trainees.

Networking at German, international and European level characterises the work of the DTV, which is actively involved in German and European lobbying. The co-operation with the German Confederation of Skilled Crafts (ZDH) is particularly close.

Last but not least, the DTV has been a close partner of Messe Frankfurt for many years in organising Texcare international, which is the most important trade fair for the industry worldwide.
